

Virtually all cats shed. Some breeds will tend to shed more than others. Outdoor cats in many cases will grow a heavy winter coat, which they then shed in the spring and summer, whereas indoor cats tend to shed year round. Pet owners' number one complaint year after year is the mess caused by pet hair and dander. You may not be the only one suffering. Chances are your cat is enduring discomfort and pain from excessive shedding. While trying to combat their own excess shedding, your cat may be gathering up large hairballs in their stomach which can be potentially harmful. Shed No More's unique blend of Essential Fatty Acids, vitamins and minerals are specially formulated into delicious fish flavored sprinkle capsules that are easily digested to provide fast relief for you and your pet. Special hairball fighting ingredients have been added that are proven to increase palatability, soothe the stomach and aid in the digestion, breakdown and release of dangerous hairballs.

Shedding is normal. It is triggered by hormones many times responding to exposure to sunlight and climactic changes. Shedding can also be caused by a lack of adequate diet and care. Excessive shedding can be unhealthy, cause pain & discomfort and lead to skin and health problems. Broken or damaged hair can lead to even more shedding. PetLabs 360's Shed No More with hairball control along with the adequate grooming and daily care routine will provide you and your pet the relief you need from non-seasonal and unnatural shedding.
